6.4.5 1855-58: Documents concerning the loan to the colony of Victoria for construction of railways

Part I: HC6.4.5. 1-3

II: HC6.4.5. 4-8

Historical Note: In 1855 the Governor of Victoria informed Barings privately that a railway loan would be required. He proposed that Barings should be solely responsible for the negotiation of the loan, and that they should become the agents of the Colony in Britain. In December 1857 formal proposals were put to Barings by the Victoria Government. In Mar 1858 Barings sent Hugh Culling Eardley Childers to Melbourne, with full powers to negotiate with the government the acceptance of the proposals. But before Childers had arrived, the government of the Colony had changed. The new government had already arranged to put out a part of the loan through local banks. The negotiation with Barings was aborted and Childers returned to England before the end of 1858

HCE Childers (1827-96) had first gone to Melbourne in 1850. His career there was a successful one, and he held several public appointments in the Colony of Victoria, the most important of which were Auditor General, 1852-53; and Commissioner of Trades and Customs, with a seat in the cabinet, 1856-57. In 1857 he returned to London as Agent General for Victoria. That post was abolished in 1858, and thus Childers was free to undertake his mission for Barings in that year

On his return to England, he entered politics. Thereafter his career was a distinguished one: Liberal M.P for Pontefract, 1860-85; Civil Lord of the Admiralty, 1864; Financial Secretary to the Treasury 1865-68; First Lord Of the Admiralty, 1868-71, when he resigned; Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, 1872-73; Secretary of State for War, 1880-82, in Gladstone's second ministry; Chancellor of the Exchequer, 1882-85; Home Secretary, 1886; Retired 1892

For Childers see also HC1.70 (1858)

The documents are:

1. 1855 20 Jul, Melbourne: Sir Charles Hotham, Lieutenant Governor of the Colony of Victoria, to Thomas Baring
Progress of railway construction in Victoria; need for a loan in 1856; inviting Barings to negotiate the loan, and to act as agent for the Colony in the payment of dividends.
